

Data on Army Spying in Germany Claimed by Weicker

8/21 8/4/73
Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. (R-Conn.) said yesterday that he had obtained evidence that U.S. Army intelligence units in West Germany spied on American organizations supporting Democratic presidential nominee George S. McGovern in 1972.

An investigator for Sen.

Weicker visited Germany in June and returned with what a Senate aide called "voluminous material," said to have come from Army intelligence sources. A Senate source said the material had security classifications "stamped all over it" and was turned over to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

West German authorities said this week that they had cleared U.S. Army surveillance activities there. The Army's own regulations limiting surveillance of American political activity apply only in the United States.

However, Tomi Schwaetzer,

an Austrian-born correspondent of the German-based Liberation News Service, whose name figured in earlier disclosures of military spying, demanded disclosure yesterday of intelligence reports about alleged taps on his personal telephone.
